Perennials help to add interest through colour, blooms, texture, and fragrance to any garden bed or container year after year. With hundreds of different varieties, there is certain to be the perfect perennial for your specific location.

1. Selection

When selecting the perfect perennials for your garden or container, you must first answer the following questions:

1. What type of soil am I planting in?
2. What is the exposure of this location?
3. What am I looking to get out of this perennial?
4. How much time do I have for maintenance?

Once you have answered these questions, your choices are narrowed, helping you select a perennial that best suits your location and desires. By answering these questions you are sure to love your selection.

2. When to Plant

The best time to plant perennials is in both spring and fall. It is also acceptable to plant in summer, just make sure you have an irrigation system to ensure enough water gets to the roots of your new plantings.

3. Fertilization

It is best to fertilize your perennials with a perennial specific fertilizer in spring and early summer. Also make sure they are planted in a rich soil. If the soil is lacking nutrients, it is important to add a soil amendment, such as Home & Garden Excellence Perennial Mix.
